What is AMCA International?

The Air Movement and Control Association International, Inc. (AMCA International) is a not-for-profit international association of the world's manufacturers of related air system equipment - primarily, but not limited to: fans, louvers, dampers, air curtains, airflow measurement stations, acoustic attenuators, and other air system components for the industrial, commercial and residential markets.

AMCA International, backed by over 50 years of standards development, is the world's leading authority in the development of the science and art of engineering as relates to air movement and air control devices. AMCA International publishes and distributes standards, references, and application manuals for specifiers, engineers, and others with an interest in air systems to use in the selection, evaluation, and troubleshooting of air system components. Many of AMCA International's standards are accepted as American National Standards.

AMCA International, with member companies and laboratories in many industrialized countries around the world, is active on the technical committees of the International Standards Organization (ISO), and participates in the development of international standards for the industry.
